

U S Block Windows Feature Retrofit and Energy Saving Products for Western Markets

Pensacola, FL – Due to the increasing cost and decreasing availability of land in many western regions, more builders are building zero lot line or cluster homes, which mean houses are in very close proximity to each other. This makes privacy windows from U S Block Windows an attractive option for homeowners who do not want the “cave-like” feeling of drawn drapes and closed blinds. U S Block acrylic privacy windows let in natural light, while operable windows and block shutters open and close to allow fresh air to circulate.

U S Block Windows features key products for western builders and remodelers. Energy Star® qualified 8-inch and 9-inch acrylic block window options are available in SunBlock™ pattern, which reduces solar heat gain. Solar Heat Gain (SHG) is the flow of radiated heat from sunlight into the home. SunBlock can also be combined with E3 triple glazed for improved u-value and insulation. In the sunbelt states, energy codes require a solar heat gain coefficient of .40 SHG and Sun Block goes above and beyond with a .31 SHG coefficient (in vinyl frame).

As desirable western areas become more built-out, this points to a strong remodeling and retrofit market. The California Flange is another technical breakthrough specially-designed for retrofit applications. It features an all-vinyl frame with a 1¾" wide outer flush flange that covers the existing window frame, eliminating the need to break the stucco. The flange can be cut to fit the opening and is AAMA certified and heavy commercial rated. The frames are available in white, tan and sandsun.

Beyond bath and spa windows where privacy is a priority, there are several creative remodeling applications for acrylic blocks. These include foyers, transoms, interior panels for walls, under counters, room dividers, or other decorative interior applications for areas that require light and privacy.

U S Block Windows feature privacy with innovative style, with easy to install and service-friendly drop glaze designs. The quickest delivery times in the industry won't leave you hanging.
